Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue focuses on the reception of papers that provide solutions for analyzing, measuring, or managing financial risk in any business decision. Likewise, papers that contribute to the existing literature on global financial risk will be accepted. Within this last line of work, analyses of global financial risks, by sectors, by geographical areas or those produced by specific events will be taken into account.

In short, we invite original contributions in English that focus on issues related to financial management applied to business and solutions applied to global financial risk management. Theoretical papers that add value to the existing literature and make a contribution in their fields of study will also be considered.

Limited financial support for publication fees and proofreading is available to excellent submissions by authors without other sources of institutional funding. Please contact the editors of this Special Issue about the Article Processing Charges (APC) and possible reductions.
