Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue titled “Financial Markets and Institutions” invites high-quality original research submissions on financial markets, financial institutions, and corporate finance. Empirical studies focusing on how financial markets and institutions respond to economic policy, particularly monetary policy, and financial regulation are especially encouraged. This Special Issue titled “Financial Markets and Institutions” will publish new and challenging studies that explore how economic institutions and regulatory environments influence the responses of financial markets on topics ranging from equity to debt, foreign exchange, and monetary policy. Papers on money, financial transactions, monetary policy, financial markets, financial institutions, financial industries, corporate finance, and international finance will be considered for publication in this Special Issue. Corporate finance may include capital structure and corporate governance topics, including ESG.
