Dear Colleagues,

As an active researcher in the field of commodity market finance, we would like to draw your attention to the Special Issue of the Journal of Risk and Financial Management (JRFM) on "Commodity Market Finance" that we are guest editing.

This Special Issue aims to cover recent developments in research on commodity market finance. We seek contributions in empirical research on commodity markets including, but not limited to, derivative pricing and valuation, risk and volatility, microstructure and efficiency, forecasting, market interrelationships, financialization, and interactions between commodity markets and the real economy. The markets of interest include those for industrial and precious metals, energy, agricultural products and livestock, and other commodities such as rubber.
