Message from the Guest Editor

Health represents an important area in our lives. The main providers of healthcare in the societies are a healthcare facilities. They represent whichever institutions participate in the health sector and are responsible for increasing the amount of health-related activities and the practical implementation of healthcare policy and public health programmes. Hence, the management of these institutions plays a significant role in the health sector.

This Special Issue is devoted to the management of healthcare facilities as individual units performing health-related activities. Its scope is to cover all the analyses associated with the performance of healthcare facilities and the implementation of health policy.
