Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Recent years have seen an increased focus on the interplay between energy economics, finance and sustainability. In exploring these interactions, many papers have put forward ideas that focus on minimising energy usage from traditional sources with an implied mitigation of economic activity. In addition, much work has tended to look upstream from the end user rather than considering the economic, financial and associated social impacts at the point of use from a consumer perspective.

In this Special Issue, we are seeking contributions that can speak to these issues from both global as well as local perspectives. We are particularly interested in papers that give consideration to fundamental underlying economic rationales and profitability, as well as the impact of energy policy changes on individuals and small business.
