Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue focuses on the broad topic of “Emerging Markets” and includes novel research and the analysis of asset prices, returns, volatility, and on pricing, hedging, economic issues, and risk management in emerging markets. Theoretical and empirical articles on broad economics and finance in emerging markets are welcome.

Contributions focusing on multivariate or high-dimensional applications in today’s complex world, novel measures of financial risk, and other types of risks implied from derivative markets, and on the use of high-frequency data of all sorts, are encouraged. We also encourage topics that look at areas within the context of emerging markets that have not yet been explored in mainstream journals in finance and economics.
