Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue is dedicated to reporting the Anthropogenic footprints on SEA riverine ecosystems. The editors invite high-quality studies focusing on any human-induced environmental impacts concerned with SEA river deltas. Since Anthropocene reflects the human-nature nexus, colleagues from both natural and social science disciplines are encouraged to submit. We are particularly interested in those studies that can cut across multiple disciplines, such as human vs. physical geography, or eco-hydrology vs. anthropology. The topics of interest include but are not limited to: human and physical geography of the riverine systems, hydrological ecosystem services, payment for ecosystem services, or integrated water resources management. Studies conducting field-based physical and social surveys, geospatial analyses, or numerical modeling are all encouraged to submit.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Land is the only open access journal covering all aspects of land science, and it is a pioneering platform for publishing on land system science. Our editorial board is comprised of eminent scholars. We publish high quality research on societally relevant, emerging and innovative topics and results in land system research. It is now one of the top land journals with a significant impact factor, and has a goal to become the best journal in land in the coming years. I strongly recommend Land for your best research publications for a fast dissemination of your research.
