Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

This special issue aims to gather research on the contribution of Ecosystem Services to sustainable development of urban and peri-urban contexts. The approach to research is open to cover a wide span of matters ranging from new methods or sources for Ecosystem Services' assessment, to advances on theoretical or empirical studies, case-study analysis and/or experiences. Manuscripts are to be considered when the aims of research are aligned to any of the following topics:

- Ecosystem services and green infrastructure: multiscale approach
- Ecosystems services in urban transects: balancing city districts
- Urban facilities and ecosystem services: multifunctionality
- Social dynamics related to ecosystem services
- Ecosystem services and specific land-use approaches
- Digital approaches to the analysis of Urban Ecosystem Services
- Location-Based data as source for the study and monitoring of ecosystem service associated dynamics
- Urban resilience and ecosystem services
- Ecosystem services and urban landscape perception
- Healthy cities and citizen wellbeing
- Urban fringe integration to urban dynamics
- Ecosystem services and social cohesion
