Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Vocabulary research has experienced substantial growth since the late 1990s, resulting in a proliferation of studies that span a range of diverse subdisciplines and investigate the intricate nature of vocabulary. This remarkable expansion underscores the complexity inherent in the study of vocabulary.

During this period, we have seen a wide range of studies that have investigated the relationship between vocabulary and various language competencies. These include studies on the relationship between vocabulary and productive language skills, such as speaking and fluency as well as writing. We have also seen studies that have looked at vocabulary in the context of receptive skills such as reading and listening, along with volumes that encompass all the four skills...
