Linguistics of Social Media

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue brings together current research grounded within a linguistics perspective (theoretical or variationist) and analysing language data from a variety of social media platforms with the goal of increasing understanding of how communication takes place in online social spaces. It is hoped that the collection of papers in this Special Issue will popularise the field of social media communication and bring together scholars who work on similar data but perhaps from different linguistics perspectives and use different methodologies. The insights gained from this body of work will showcase how concepts and theories from linguistics can be used to fruitfully increase our knowledge of this dynamic and ever-changing communication environment, while also challenging some of the prescriptive assumptions circulating in relation to it.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Languages (ISSN 2226-471X) is now in its eighth year since its inception in 2015. It is an Open Access journal which seeks to stimulate debates on key issues in languages and linguistics. We welcome papers at the cutting edge of different fields, ranging from applied linguistics to descriptive and theoretical linguistics. Submissions may consist of research articles and critical reviews as well as proposals for Special Issues where multi-disciplinary approaches and different perspectives on current issues are explored. We invite you to consider Languages as a forum for sharing your work.
