Managing Directors' Liability Risk in the Digital Economy

Message from the Guest Editors

Recently, the digital revolution and the advent of the new data economy era have introduced serious challenges to corporate governance and the management of large enterprises across the globe. More severe data protection regulations have been enacted in many jurisdictions, and digital assets management has quickly become one of the core concerns across a variety of business sectors. Against this backdrop, several interesting and largely unexplored legal issues have arisen in connection to the potential liability of directors and officers in the event of data breaches or cyber-attacks. This Special Issue aims at investigating the most critical issues: directors' liability for their organizational/management decisions; extent of directors' liability for damage suffered by companies, shareholders and investors; directors' liability for the amounts corresponding to fines and penalties imposed on companies; insurance and reinsurance coverage; alternative risk transfer and financing tools. We welcome contributions covering these topics from any jurisdiction.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Laws is an international, open access journal featuring rigorous scholarship on critical developments in governance, courts, agencies, and social order. Analysis and synthesis, theory and practice, and empirical and doctrinal work have appeared in the journal; contributions that bridge these traditional boundaries are particularly welcome. The social sciences and humanities generate insights both from and for the legal system. While theory grounds Laws in a timeless dialogue shaped by traditions of inquiry, legal practice ensures that scholars are addressing pressing problems. Both normative and positive scholarship can aid policymakers, judges, and agency officials. Laws brings together the work of theorists and practitioners, and a diverse range of empirical researchers, to promote the progress of foundational legal norms.
