Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Movement disorders pose significant challenges in clinical management, with conditions such as Parkinson's disease/syndrome, dystonia and tremors. Despite substantial efforts, the precise etiology of movement disorders remains elusive. Nonetheless, recent developments in clinical interventions have led to notable improvements, facilitating the identification of the underlying mechanisms. This Special Issue aspires to compile comprehensive review articles and pioneering research investigations to elucidate recent developments in movement disorders. By assessing the current state of our understanding, this collection seeks to propel future advancements in treatment strategies.
