Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Recently, significant improvement has been made for the dental materials research such as dental implant, dental adhesive, and zirconia based dental materials. Although special issue of Materials entitled “Dental Materials” was closed, we feel the strong need to provide opportunity to present further dental materials research results and review papers to the materials community. Here, I would like to call for papers for “Dental Biomaterials”. This special issue will facilitate further understanding between the dental materials community and the broader materials community as well as among the dental materials community.
