Message from the Guest Editors

The journal Medicina launched a new Special Issue titled "Guided Bone Regeneration in Oral Surgery".

Research in dentistry has been very productive in the past 40 years and many new materials and technologies have been developed, leading to innovative and more minimalistic and invasive therapies. The work of clinicians is of paramount importance to translate previous research into clinical practice, and evidence-based dentistry is the foundation of every clinical practice. This Special Issue will focus on the new techniques and advances in guided bone regeneration. More than thirty years have passed since the first publications on the topic and many different materials and methods have been tested since then. The goal of this Special Issue is to update the dental community with the latest information in order to provide clinicians with approaches that are predictable, minimally invasive and easily reproducible.
