Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Breast cancer is acknowledged as an international priority in healthcare. It is currently the most common cancer in women worldwide, with a continuous increase in incidence.

In recent years, cancer research has allowed us to introduce new systemic treatments into clinical practice. Nonetheless, the constant need to improve the therapeutic approach to this disease remains a target to be pursued daily in research activity.

The aim of this Special Issue is to underline the evolution of the treatment of early and advanced breast cancer through reviews of the scientific literature or meta-analyses. At the same time, this Special Issue is aimed at original papers with an exploratory nature investigating new and original therapeutic pathways.
