Message from the Guest Editor

For this Special Issue on “Nutrition Assessment and Chronic Disease”, we seek articles (i.e., research papers, short communications, reviews, and meta-analyses) from academia and clinical settings that address the important themes related to effective nutritional assessment for identifying, treating, and/or attenuating chronic disease, such as:

- Identifying gold standards for subjective and objective data points;
- Developing best practices for obtaining feedback on the selection interventions;
- Identify research gaps in relation to nutritional assessment and chronic disease;

Effective ways to train future clinicians (undergraduate and graduate students, current clinicians) on how to critically think through and complete a nutritional assessment.
