Feature Papers in Proteins and Amino Acids in Relation to Human Health

Message from the Guest Editor

The purpose of this Special Issue is to highlight the functional role of dietary proteins and their amino acid constituents in the context of human health. This Special Issue, focusing primarily on human/clinical research, seeks original research papers and review articles (both narrative and systematic in nature) outlining the role(s) of proteins/amino acids in regulating metabolism across any tissue of the body in health, exercise, inactivity, and disease states. This Special Issue is relevant for observational and interventional trials, in addition to biomarker and bioactive compound-related research. Studies of human cell data derived from in vitro investigations of proteins, peptides, and amino acids are also within the scope of this Special Issue, as are studies using animal models, where the model's translational reference to humans is clearly illustrated.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Nutrients is an on-line open access journal that was first published in 2009. Nutrients adheres to rigorous peer-review and editorial processes and publishes only high quality manuscripts that address important issues related to the impacts of nutrients on human health. The Impact Factor of Nutrients has risen rapidly since its establishment and it is now ranked in the first quartile of journals publishing in the field of nutrition and dietetics research.
