Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The field of antiviral drug discovery has been involved in an unprecedented endeavor to enhance established antiviral strategies and develop novel and innovative approaches for new classes of antiviral agents targeting different life cycle pathways that are critical for the virus, including viral and host factors and new antiviral modalities.

In the present Special Issue entitled “Antiviral Drugs”, we are inviting the submission of original research articles, letters, and/or reviews from academia, research institutes, not-for-profit organizations, or industry that work on the identification, synthesis, and evaluation of direct-acting antiviral or host-targeting agents that inhibit viral replication or pathogenesis. Furthermore, we also welcome the submission of mechanistic studies of new small organic molecules, metal complexes, and natural products, as well as studies on drug resistance, the in silico design of antiviral agents, and antiviral target validation.
