Message from the Guest Editors

With this Special Issue, entitled “Natural Products and Phytomedicines: From Chemical Profiling and Pharmacological Properties to Therapeutic Applications”, we aim to publish rigorously peer-reviewed original research and recent review articles regarding natural products' compositional, biochemical, pharmacological, and therapeutic properties.

Furthermore, works focusing on improved/new sustainable extraction, analytical screening, and molecular purification strategies are welcome to be submitted. Besides in vitro and in vivo studies, clinical trials focused on bioavailability, toxicity, secondary interaction, and synergetic properties are welcomed. Furthermore, manuscripts focused on the differential efficacy between preparations from leaf powder, decoction, infusions, or pills are also invited. Finally, the purpose of this Special Issue is to deliver the most recent scientific breakthroughs and technological developments disclosing the pivotal status held by evidence-based phytopharma and natural derivatives.
