The 20th Anniversary of Pharmaceuticals—Advances in Natural Products

Message from the Guest Editors

Historically, natural products (NPs) have been used as remedies for many diseases and illnesses. Even today, with their high structural, physicochemical diversity and health benefits, NPs are suitable for use not only as therapeutic agents but also as cosmetics and food. This Special Issue aims to discuss all the new aspects related to NPs with pharmaceutical applications. The topics of the Special Issue include but are not limited to in vitro and in vivo evaluation of the biological activities, bioavailability, investigation of the mechanisms of action and pharmaceutical formulations of characterized herbal extracts, pure isolated compounds and/or semisynthetic derivatives. Authors are invited to submit original research articles, reviews, and short communications exploring the recent advances in this field.
