Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Biomedical sciences are now focused on developing secure and personalized medicine using new methods for disease treatment. This progress will be achieved through interdisciplinary research collaboration.

The search for new therapeutic tools is being advanced by a variety of disciplines, including from natural products as medicinal plants, as a source of biochemical compounds, to the use of nanoplatform as a carrier of drug delivery. The aim of this Special Issue is to contribute new alternatives of drug discovery and clarify the mechanisms of action.
