Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The goal of this Special Issue is to present the latest advances in using molecular imaging for biopharmaceutical research and development, with the ultimate aim of further accelerating biopharmaceutical development by using molecular imaging and personalized therapy.

We welcome reviews and the original research papers regarding novel and innovative molecular imaging methods for profiling and characterizing the distribution and effect of any of the biopharmaceuticals mentioned above. Molecular imaging modalities can also be included, and we also seek state-of-the-art artificial intelligence methods, combined with molecular imaging. Along with biopharmaceuticals, emerging biological entities, such as exosomes, liposomes, and microbiomes are also encouraged for submission.
