Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The use of technology to enhance and facilitate learning in pharmacy education is on the rise. Technology is often used to either improve student engagement or to support flexible learning anytime and anywhere. The use of technology in a virtual environment also provides a safe space for students to make mistakes without the potentially life-threatening consequences of a real-world error.

Furthermore, many pharmacy schools have had to move towards remote learning and online education in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. To facilitate learning during the pandemic, faculties have used innovative technology-based solutions that may impact education for the foreseeable future.

We invite you to share your research concerning implementation, evaluation, and teaching experience in the use of technology to enhance pharmacy teaching and learning, including innovative methods used to realize remote and online learning during the COVID-19 outbreak.
