Message from the Guest Editors

Nowadays, both the production processes and research activities are affected by the use of 3D printing technology. In order to overcome the major limitation and cover as many fields of application as possible and expand the spectrum and employ of the printed objects in areas such as biomedical, mechanical, electronical and so on, the research is still on going. This Special Issue aims to mark the state of the art in 3D and 4D by hosting all those studies that propose advantages associated with rapid prototyping.
