Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The field of polymer blends has led the development of polymer materials and expanded significantly in the last several decades. Their potential applications are ever-growing, especially in the recycling of polymer materials. To highlight the recent advances in this field and the significant contributions that chemists around the world have made in these areas, Polymers is publishing a Special Issue called “The Structure and Properties of Polymer Blends and Their Applications”.

It is our pleasure to invite you to submit a communication, full paper, or minireview to this Special Issue. We would be delighted if you could accept this invitation and would be grateful if you could let us know, at your earliest convenience, if you plan to contribute to this collection.

We look forward to hearing from you soon.

With kind regards,

Dr. Xu-Ming Xie
