Message from the Guest Editors

The beginning of polymer science in Uruguay is relatively recent and the most significant works has been reported just after the late eighties, covering the study of synthesis and structural characterization of organic and coordination polymers (FQ-UdelaR), polymers from natural sources (FCIEN&FQ-UdelaR), polymers with immunological (FQ-UdelaR), electromechanical (FCIEN-UdelaR), optical (FING-UdelaR) and antifouling properties (FING-UdelaR).

In this Special Issue, we aim to present a broad overview on recent developments in the field of polymer science and technology in Uruguay. Reviews, original articles, and state-of-the-art research papers, covering all the aspects of current trends in polymer-based materials research performed in Uruguay or by Uruguayan researchers working abroad are welcome.

The topics of this special issue will include, but are not limited to:

- Polymers chemistry and physics
- Polymersmicro- and nano-composites
- Biopolymers and bio-based polymers
- Polymers processing and engineering
- Polymers sustainability
