Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This issue connects researchers from the community of polymers with the natural fiber composites community and foster a deeper mutual understanding of the expertise and experience each community has developed.

In general, this Special Issue is oriented toward innovations and improvements in natural fiber composites. Topics covered include natural fiber manufacturing, advanced multiple functionalities (physical, chemical, and biological functionalities), original design for natural fiber composites, composites recycling, fiber–matrix interactions, advanced applications of natural fiber composites in water treatment, filtration, tissue engineering, wound dressing, drug delivery, food packaging, energy storage, electronic devices, and intelligent sensors, among others.

A guide for authors and other relevant information for the submission of manuscripts is available on the journal's website.
