Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue will be devoted to understanding catholicity in the twenty-first century as an emergent process of “faith making wholes”, a participative faith in a world of evolution. Questions relevant to this Special Issue include (but are not limited to) the following: Can a renewed understanding of catholicity contribute to the vitality of incarnational personhood through the engagement of the Gospel life? Does catholicity raise a consciousness of participation and community? Can a renewed understanding of catholicity support the urgent need to form communities of ecological interdependence? Can a renewed understanding of catholicity refocus racial, gender, and social justice toward the flourishing of persons in community? How does a dynamic understanding of catholicity reflect the radical involvement of God in the process of ongoing creation? Does catholicity flourish within open systems of life? What does a dynamic principle of catholicity mean for the Church in the twenty-first century?

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
