Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Our main goal for this Special Issue is to recognize outstanding exemplars and promote the growth of interdisciplinary research within the psychology of religion and spirituality. Overall, we wish to demonstrate how diverse, multilevel, and nonreductive approaches enrich our cumulative knowledge of religion and spirituality. We have a particular interest in highlighting research that includes 1. collaborative research across cultural and national boundaries, 2. diverse contexts and culture, 3. rejections of an exclusive reliance on singular perspectives or methodologies favored by Western psychological approaches, and 4. applied research capitalizing on an interdisciplinary perspective. We welcome both empirical studies and theoretical papers from all disciplines in collaboration with the psychology of religion and spirituality. The call is open to any research in relevant subject areas.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
