Message from the Guest Editors

The specific scope of this Special Issue is to grasp a deeper understanding of the spiritual and/or existential issues that are linked to health and health care. We invite papers which look into the following areas:

Experiences of patients: How do people in care experience the care provided? Are their spiritual/existential needs for care met?

Care providers: How do care providers experience their competence in spiritual/existential care? What does spiritually/existentially competent care look like? What are the best practices or unmet needs?

Educational perspectives: What kind of education is being provided and developed? Are there elements in education that are still neglected in the field of spiritual/existential care?

Policy making: How should and could care system(s) be enhanced?

Articles that reflect on the themes addressed by this Special Issue through various theoretical, methodological, and empirical approaches are welcomed. The call is open to research from any discipline, including multidisciplinary approaches.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
