

Special Issue

Faith and Youth Today

Message from the Guest Editors

To delve into the complex relationship between youth—older teenagers (15–17 years), emerging adults (18–24 years) and young adults (25–30 years)—and faith, demands a nuanced enquiry. This Special Edition aims to address the above questions and more, calling researchers and scholars working on related issues to explore the interaction between youth and faith and to engage this project by means of theoretical and/or research-based (qualitative or quantitative) papers from interdisciplinary perspectives. We solicit a variety of articles that capture a wide range of angles of the prescribed theme. Approaching the issue from the point of view of Sociology, Psychology, Pedagogy, Philosophy, Theology, and more, would help readers better comprehend how youth understand and live faith from their adolescence into young adulthood.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
