Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue will cover and promote the latest advances related to multimodal remote sensing technologies. Its scope includes current technological advances at either the sensor or acquisition platform levels for combining synchronously or not two or more imaging techniques as well as recent methodological advances (models and algorithms) for efficient and successful processing of the multimodal data collected.

This includes innovative approaches based either on advanced mathematics and statistics or supervised and unsupervised deep learning as soon as they are designed to infer the true informative value of the multimodal data remotely sensed and showcase how they can improve output performance.

A wide spectrum of the latest emerging applications highlighting both the capacity and benefits enabled by remotely sensed multimodal data is accordingly targeted.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Sensors is a leading journal devoted to fast publication of the latest achievements of technological developments and scientific research in the huge area of physical, chemical and biochemical sensors, including remote sensing and sensor networks. Both experimental and theoretical papers are published, including all aspects of sensor design, technology, proof of concept and application. Sensors organizes Special Issues devoted to specific sensing areas and applications each year.
