Sensor Enabled Smart Energy Solutions

Message from the Guest Editors

The global environmental and energy challenges cannot be effectively addressed without digital transformation of the energy sector. Today's sensors and metering technologies provide the means for such transformation. Globally, increasingly more sensors and smart meters are being deployed due to their benefits for customers, policies, and regulations. To leverage sensors and smart meter data and to enjoy the full potential and benefits of digitalization, it is important to develop ICT-based solutions that enable a reliable, sustainable, and low-carbon energy system.
