Message from the Guest Editors

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, a number of restrictions including lockdowns, quarantines, and sanitary cordons have been implemented in numerous countries and territories around the world in a state of total medicalization of the different spheres of everyday life: family, friends, education, work, health, recreation, etc. The pandemic also stressed the growing disparities in societies around the world, the making of new moral discourses around health, illness and wellness, and the impact of health misinformation.

We welcome original articles and review articles based on comprehensive literature reviews from different academic disciplines that engage issues of medicalization, moralization, and misinformation of life and society, such as sociology, gender theory, anthropology, and psychology, based on theoretical analysis and/or empirical studies with different methodological approaches, including arts-based research and participatory methods. We also invite presentations that discuss the wide variety of ethical issues that arise from medicalization processes in areas ranging from medical research conduct to reproductive health or end-of-life care.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
