Dear Colleagues,

I invite you to submit abstracts for consideration in this Special Issue of Societies, which will explore how religious-based entities engage in the provision of social welfare services. For many years, religious-based entities have been involved in the care of people in their communities, with various approaches and methods of engaging with people and providing care. This issue seeks to further the exploration of how social services are or are not part of the cadre of services and supports available in various communities. Research articles (particularly community-engaged research), case studies and conceptual papers will be considered.

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
