Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to explore the crucial connection between public health, sustainable well-being, and organizational dynamics. Focused on fostering healthier and more sustainable workplaces, the collection of articles within this Special Issue aims to broaden understanding and offer practical implications regarding the diverse facets of individual and group health and well-being as well as the establishment of sustainable organizations. Encompassing physical, psychological, and social dimensions of health and sustainable well-being, this Special Issue aims to contribute valuable insights into the field's theoretical and applied aspects.

The scope of this Special Issue spans a variety of topics, including the influence of organizational structures on individuals' health and well-being, the role of technology in enhancing workplace well-being, and strategies for promoting sustainability in organizational practices. By integrating insights from public health, human resource management, social psychology, environmental psychology, and organizational psychology, this Special Issue offers a comprehensive understanding of the factors shaping modern work environments.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
