Rethinking Race, Racism and Ethnicity for Migration and Refugee Studies

Message from the Guest Editor

In a similar vein, the anti-foreigner racisms of the present day can be explained in light of mobility regimes that are specific to the post-Cold war era as well as histories of imperialism and settler colonialism that are inextricably intertwined with Asian, Latinx, Arab-Muslim and indigenous cultures. But migrant flows are also conduits for sociopolitical dynamics and cultural narratives that complicate white/black or Western/nonWestern binaries. There is also much to learn from the role that migrant mobilities and episodes of displacement have played in shaping new paradigms of race and ethnicity. In a similar vein, the anti-foreigner racisms of the present day can be explained in light of mobility regimes that are specific to the post-Cold war era as well as histories of imperialism and settler colonialism that are inextricably intertwined with Asian, Latinx, Arab-Muslim and indigenous cultures.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
