Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The scientific contributions of social work are not always taken into account. However, scientific evidence has already shown the contributions that this discipline is making to both the scientific community and society, which has become even more evident after the COVID-19 pandemic. Some research in social work is responding to the consecution of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). This Special Issue is in the same vein, and it will focus on the following topics and contribute to the achievement of social impact and sustainability in our societies:

- The interactions of social work with other disciplines or subjects (education, health, etc.) in order to respond to urgent social needs related to the SDGs.
- Successful actions from social work that are contributing to the consecution of the SGDs.
- The social inclusion and improvement of vulnerable groups.
- Gender issues such as overcoming situations of violence and gender inequalities addressed in social work in an interdisciplinary way.
- Governance in social work.

This Special Issue welcomes contributions from diverse disciplines, with a special focus on their interaction with social work.
