Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This rapidly urbanizing world is undergoing significant transformations due to technological advancements. There are urgent yet under-researched issues at the intersection of smart transportation, urban planning, and sustainability.

This Special Issue aims to address this gap by inviting submissions that delve into innovative practices that turn technologies into smart, sustainable solutions to achieve positive societal outcomes. As transportation shall serve as an enabler and facilitator of opportunities for all, we encourage submissions that employ interdisciplinary approaches, actively engage with communities, and benefit under-served populations.

Invited topics include, but are not limited to, autonomous vehicles, micro-transit, micro-mobility, shared mobility, infrastructure for electric vehicles, affordable and equitable access, health and well-being, behavioral aspects, integrated planning, safety, multimodal integration, post-pandemic public transportation, climate resilience, congestion mitigation, and emission reduction.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.
