Message from the Guest Editors

The aim of this Special Issue is to provide recent advances in the field of environmental regulation policies and pollutant emissions governance. Regarding issues related to environmental regulation policies and pollutant emissions governance, the topics for the Special Issue include but are not limited to the following. First, how can we accurately estimate and forecast the current situation and future trend in energy consumption, resulting in carbon emissions or other pollutant emissions in some countries or regions? Second, what are the impacts of environmental regulation policies on pollutant emissions governance? Third, how can we accurately estimate the potential and cost of pollutant emissions reduction in each region on the basis of clarifying the imputation of responsibilities for reducing pollutant emissions? Finally, for relevant stakeholders, how can they make full use of environmental regulation policies to lessen pollutant emissions in order to achieve regional emissions reduction targets?
