Message from the Guest Editors

It is undoubtful that cultural heritage is subject to a perspective based on sustainability. As cultural heritage belongs to humanity, it should be preserved for future generations.

This special issue aims at further inquiring and debating the role of cultural initiatives in the face of the most modern perspectives on sustainable development. In this vein, the Special Issue seeks articles that address this complex and multifaceted topic. In particular, we encourage the submission of original articles that consider the following, but not exclusively:

- How cultural heritage valorization practices are related to sustainable goals and sustainable development;
- The relation between people and cultural heritage, especially citizens' well-being, sense of belonging, identity, and cultural memory, and its implications in terms of sustainable development;
- Analysis of innovative and sustainable managerial practices of cultural initiatives and organisations and the economic impact of cultural interventions;
- Theorizing of the sustainability side of how communities, organisations or individuals interrelate with cultural heritage
