Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic has been enormous and unpredictable for the sustainability of corporations worldwide. Under the transition era of corporate governance in stakeholder-oriented corporate governance, there might be a significant research question of how shareholder activism has affected corporate actions during the COVID-19 pandemic (Yoshikawa and Chua, 2020). Thus, it is crucial to reveal how the feature of national-level corporate governance is helpful in solving any agency problem and can contribute to sustainable corporations under the threat of pandemics.

In this Special Issue, we welcome papers that intend to reveal how different national-level corporate governance mechanisms have affected corporate actions and stock market responses during the worldwide pandemic era. Thus, this Special Issue will focus on empirical and case studies which attempt to reveal the role of stakeholder-oriented corporate governance mechanisms.
