Message from the Guest Editors

This Special issue welcomes articles on the management of Post-disaster housing reconstruction programmes. We seek for contributions on how previous experiences and lessons learned can help in understanding the complexities of post-disaster context and the challenges that affect the management of the permanent housing reconstruction process, cases that unpack the associated social, economic and environmental issues facing affected communities and those that suggest using big data and implementing resilience information into building information models. For further reading, please visit the Special Issue Website.
