Message from the Guest Editors

1. Land-based Data Communication Networks are continually making progress. Regarding Maritime Communications, however, remaining problems include slow communication speeds and limited communication capacity.
2. Journals related to electrical and electronic communication engineering (IEEE, etc.) and journals related to marine engineering (JMST) cover topics such as specific technological development. However, since such information is rarely provided having a viewpoint of maritime communication networks, we believe that they will be effectively complemented in a timely manner.
