Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue of Sustainability seeks to disseminate the latest findings in, and implications of, all areas specifically related to global economies and markets.

Topics of interest around global economies and markets include artificial intelligence, circular economy, shadow economy, debt, development, foreign investment, governability, sustainability, trade, and other global economy issues relevant for achieving a sustainable world.

In this Special Issue, original research articles that focus on challenging and debatable issues in the field are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Poverty;
- Income concentration;
- Global warming and climate change;
- Clean and green technologies;
- Supply chain bottlenecks;
- Multinational enterprises;
- International finance and trade;
- Sustainable development goals.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.
