submissions:

closed (30 April 2021)

In this Special Issue, we invite contributions that examine the impact of COVID-19 on different aspects of the sport sector, illustrate how the sport sector has responded to the pandemic and how recovery can be sustained going forward. We also invite submissions that show the contribution of the sport sector in relation to the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (<https://www.un.org/development/desa/disabilities/envision2030>). International comparisons and specific analyses for developing economies are particularly welcome. The Special Issue relates to themes in:

- Sport economics, particularly the relationship of amateur engagement with economic growth;
- Sport participation and sport inequalities;
- Economic growth and sustainability in sport;
- Sport's contribution to the UN's Sustainable Development Goals;
- Transparency, democracy and sport;
- Changes in sport participation and their economic impact;
- Sport events and COVID-19;
- Public and private policies for sustainability in sport;
- The sustainability of professional leagues during and beyond COVID-19;
- The economic impact of COVID-19 on the sport sector.
