Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims at deepening knowledge and collecting evidence on the impact of innovative ways of organizing people on individual and organizational outcomes related to sustainability and well-being at work. Contributions may focus on but are not limited to exploring, discussing, and investigating the effectiveness of organizational initiatives implemented to reorganize people's jobs and boost sustainable work-related outcomes. Evidence-based case studies, as well as quantitative or qualitative longitudinal investigations that can provide fruitful insights on how to successfully reimagine roles, activities, and tasks for future growth, are welcome.
