Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The contents of this Special Issue refer to the main question on “Sustainable Risk Management: How we can manage risks in a responsible manner?”

This subject was selected in response to the uncertainties that make safety decision making very difficult. The possibility of making a wrong decision has particular relevance due to the increasing complexity of all managing aspects characterizing contemporary system. Hence, an approach based on a more holistic perspective allows us to assure a state of resilience and sustainability.

Evidence of the requirement to approach the theme of sustainable risk management is among the difficulties to explain and resolve the problems of health and safety, row materials and power generation.
