Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue will consist of papers describing the state-of-the-art in sustainable public transportation systems. Activities in the field of public transport, intelligent and integrated transport systems, as well as the practical application of knowledge about passenger transport, design, and operation of public transport systems and processes, contribute to ensuring sustainable public transportation system development. This is achieved by providing conditions for the safe, efficient, and economic public transportation of people that can minimize the negative impact on the environment.
