Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The intricate relationship between economic practices and sustainable development has never been more critical than it is now, in a rapidly evolving world of environmental challenges and economic transformations. As the planet faces unprecedented environmental crises, from climate change to resource depletion, there is an urgent need to redefine sustainability and reshape policymaking towards sustainable development that fosters quality of life. This aim goes beyond the standard definitions of sustainability and requires an interdisciplinary perspective and collaboration across disciplines. Therefore, this Special Issue seeks to deepen our understanding of how diverse economic practices and policies across the globe impact sustainable development, particularly in the context of the environmental challenges we face. This exploration is about identifying problems and uncovering opportunities for innovative economic strategies that can lead to more sustainable outcomes.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.
